Cincinnati. New York.. Chicago.... The game of baseball with Chicago at the American Park yesterday was of the strenuous variety. There was something doing in the shape of trouble from the beginning to the very end. During the contest Umpire Haskell became the centre of a lot of excitement, which at one period of the proceedings threatened to bring the contest to a sudden termination by reason of the objections raised by the players of both teams to the Haskell de-

Not that there was any chance of Mr. Haskell encountering any lrate spectators, but on account of a picturesque decision by which Second Baseman Mertes was declared out on strikes in the last inning. and at a point of the soirce when there were two of his companion players occu-

There was discust written all over the Mertes features and he endeavored to walk over to the entrance with Mr. Haswhile pouring into the latter's unwilling ears a Chicago opinion of his abilities as an umpire. Mr. Shugart, also of the visiting forces, tried to butt into the conversation and in a second some hundred or so of the spectators had wandered over to the vicinity to listen to the "Help! Help! Help!" yelled the umpire; "they are using language that is entirely foreign to me. Help! Help! Won't, some kind person please help me?"

Then half a dozen of the police force at the park formed a V trick and came through the crowd with a rush and forming a hollow square around Mr. Haskell escorted him to the office, where his face resumed its wonted color. For the moment it looked as if the riot call would have to be sent out, but happily this extreme measure was avoided. But it is worthy of note that Umpire Haskell did not leave the ball park until he had squinted through one of the knot holes in the fence and saw the Chicago players, with Mr. Mertes in their midst. disappearing toward the city on top of Trilby chariot.

Altogether Mr. Haskell enjoyed a few exciting moments yesterday afternoon, and the very fact that the Manningites came out ahead was largely responsible for the crowd forgetting in their joyousness the fact that Mr. Haskell's errors of judgment were as numerous as they were the local men, and performed his duties with much ability. Indeed, up to the eighth inning he put up a game that was 999 fine. But in the next to the last in- team's lead of one run, but failed. his speed, and during the inning the Chies banged out four hits, more than they had score:

And again, in the final round, with two men out, Hoy and Jones managed to land the ball in safe terri-tory, and for a moment or so matters ap-peared rather bright for the visiting delegation, but Mr. Mertes was not clever enough to turn the trick and was called out on strikes. It was a sad wind-up from a Lake Front point of view, but the 1,500 enthusiasts who had forgotten all about home and supper gave many evidences of sincere approval at the feat of downing these would-be champs. After their recent sojourn at the Massachusetts centre of culture and refinement, where the Clarke Griffinites were soundly spanked for hankering after the pennant they came to the Capital full of determination to do something to retrieve their losses of the last stand. They played well enough, but they were unable to find Mr. Carrick's clusive shoots with any degree of frequency. Notes of the Game.

Yesterday was the first time Coughlir was ever jut out of a game during his baseball career. And as it was, Haskell's baseball carrier. And as it was Haskell's action was inexcusable as the local third baseman did not do one-half the kicking that some of the Chicago men did or the same point. Mettes himself objected more than the entire Washington team. The member of the visiting force who was put out of the grounds was Burke. He was not in the game, and there was no chance whereby he would be. But it looked well and was a grandstand play on the part of Haskell, and it couldn't injure the chances of the Chies winning the game. Haskell works for Ban Johnson and Mertes works for Comiskey, Johnson and Comiskey are at present on son and Mertes works for Comiskey, Johnson and Comiskey are at present on a fishing expedition and George Stallings, of the Detroit club, avers that the prefi-dent of the Chicago club can get anything he wants to from the Johnson ampires. The Comiskeyites certainly got about all they asked for yesterday, were filled. Manning should see to it that no umpire be allowed to stay in Washington during an entire home series. The local audiences have become pretty well imbued with the idea that Haskell is incompetent and no matter how hard he may try, they will continue to hoot his decisions. A series of nine consecutive games is enough, too, for any umpire to preside over in this or any other city.

PRINTERS AGAIN DEFEATED

The Census Clerks Add Another Victory to Their List.

Pitcher Ashley Makes an Exençaton Into the Air, Assisted by Poor Support-Bond Falls to Hit When the Bases Are Filled - The Score.

Santos Dumont's territory was invaded yesterday afternoon by "Silvers" Ashley, who was slated to keep the sphere zigzagging to the plate in order to fool the Census contingent of ball players. In the third inning Ashley went up into the air like an Eddy kite on a breezy afternoon, and when he returned to mother earth the Census men had scored five runs. But he alone is not responsible for the loss of the game. There is another individual on the game. There is another individual on the Government Printing Office team who can share the blame,

That person is one Mr. Bond, who might reasonably share the responsibility, for That person is one Mr. Bond, who might reasonably share the responsibility, for had he held on to a high fly that dropped right into his paws the men from First Street would not have scored three of their runs, and had he hit the spheroid when three men occupied the bags on two occasions the printers would have won easily with hands down. With all the bags full this exponent of the Government typesetters' team came up to the plate and fanned out without having hit as much as a foul.

Ashiey had the population takers guessing for the first two rounds, but in the third the manipulators of the tabulating machines took to his delivery with the earnestness with which the proverbial tramp takes to pie and malted milk. When the smoke cleared away in that fatal round they had secured eight bingles and made them count as five runs, much to the disappointment of the typos.
